

What I am writing today is very particular about everything that happened during the day.

I woke up on my terrace and arranged my bed in a way to protect my cot from being exposed to sun and then came to my home with my copper water bottle and my mobile. I placed both things on my study table and went to the bathroom to do things to refresh. After that, I had warm water which I happened to heat my water and drank while browsing the mobile phone. Once I had done that, I proceeded to read the newspaper and I had a 30 minutes walk. While doing my walk, my parents bought two pillows and I had a disagreement with my mother over my tiffin. Finally, I ate upma and started reading the book.

In the afternoon I completed the daily quota of reading books and spent time browsing twitter, youtube and especially lunch. I started a sql tutorial and understood concepts but while studying we had power cuts in my area. In the evening, I did my leg exercise and had my bath. When I came home, again we had power cuts.

I did watch some youtube tutorials of swift language and we had the power cut and I lost interest in my studies for today and did watch some political videos about the Russian invasion.

We got the power around 8 pm and I started writing this diary and have to go and eat dinner and watch the eyes wide shut...