

I woke up at 5:30 am to start to my college. When I reached the college, my class contained only 15 students out of 43 I guess. He gave the day for our project and in the final hour, he explained the questions that might come at the final exam. After my shift, I went to the grocery store to buy the groceries. After coming home, I went to the rogers stadium to work part-time. In the end, I cleaned only a few utensils out of all the work in the container where I work. After signing off from my shift, I went up to see my friends and we started our way back home. I reached my home. when I was walking to my home, a person introduced himself and we had a bit of chat and exchanged our numbers. The working in the rogers was good and I learnt a few new things, boarded the tram or other car I guess.
