

I woke up pretty early compared to normal days because my father called me to make the monthly EMI payment to his car. I paid the amount and started my day by brushing and attending the class. It was a demo in the class and I thought of spending the time on newspaper and book reading. I did it this one until the afternoon before I go for a bath at half-past twelve. After the bath, I got ready and started my way to attend the interview for the role of security guard job. I gave the interview and they told me they will get back to me if I was selected for that job. The news hit me hard when I heard those words and it haunted me throughout the day. I watched one episode of the House of cards web series after I came home and prepared the tea. In the evening, I completely worked on the project and got to the end. There were a few topics I didn't get even after several tries and I shifted my focus to applying for jobs on indeed. I applied to several jobs that I dont even care what they are and where I am going. After so much of my time applying to jobs, my mind got free and focused on other things. I ate pizza for my dinner and spoke about movies while having dinner. Right now, I am done with everything on my night schedule. I am sleeping today in Dheeraj's room because of one simple reason. Tomorrow, Mahesh and Arvind go to work and college respectively and they will wake up in the morning and makes sounds under different circumstances. I dont want to wake up for this because I dont have proper sleep every day because of my class schedule.