

I woke up at exactly 8 am and did my daily bathroom and breakfast schedules. I got ready for my part-time job and went after my programs got over in the room. I caught the bus and reached the shop 30 minutes prior to my schedule. During this time, I spoke to Narasimha and started my job. I did some heavy work compared to the other days. I cleaned the dustbins, removed the card boxes, and disposed of the garbages. The remaining time I spent in the front was doing bills, and preparing coffees. I came home and ate my lunch. After my lunch, I studied the newspaper and did something which I always regret about it in my entire life. I will never write about that in my entire life. During the night, I studied CSS language and made Maggi for my dinner. I ate my food and prepared the buttermilk. With the buttermilk in the hand, I called my parents and spoke to them about various issues. After my parents, I talked to both Sunil and Krishna about so many various things. Right now, I completed watching the javascript one-hour tutorial and started writing this diary. Once I am done with this, I will soak the almonds for the next day, brush my teeth, and do my bathroom schedule.