

This is the diary for 20 April but I am writing this one on 21st April at around half past six. there is only one thing why I am writing today yesterday, I was so tired after the procession of Sri Rama. I woke up as usual and did my daily chores up to the afternoon and then watched web series, youtube videos. At around 4 pm, I went outside and I was waiting on the road with Sunil. My uncle called me and Sunil and told us to participate in the procession rather than watch from some distance. I was thinking of getting a chance to sit on a tractor and do some pooja to the people who offer coconuts. I went to my home and did a very quick bath and came to the temple and sat on the tractor to perform the rituals. Then, the procession started and I did give sweets and chickpeas to the people who came to the procession. I continued this process for the full procession and it took almost 5-6 hours. I came home at around 9 pm and had a bath after my dad's. Then, I went to sleep without doing a brushing because I was tired of the journey I took. The only person who applied colors to me in the procession was Pallavi known popularly as pallu. she sprayed color on me while I was passing on the tractor after performing or completing rituals at their home. I thoroughly enjoyed the journey and it was good for me because I spoke to a lot of new people and watched some old men dancing to the beats after being fully drunk.
