

Let me start from the first. Today is the day that Indians take pride in their lives no matter what they are or who they believe because it is the day India got independence from the fuckers who ruled over us for almost 200 fucking years. I woke up early because this is the first day of my job at Tim Hortons. I didn't sleep for my daily schedule due to the sleep which is depriving in my eyes due to job as well as yesterday I slept up to 2 pm. I got ready and started my day on the job. I boarded the bus and reached 40 to 45 minutes early. I roamed around the coffee shop for a few minutes and went inside to start my work. The manager came and called me at five to nine and he gave me clothes such as a belt, a t-shirt, a pant, and a badge. I got changed in the bathroom and he started teaching me everything from the start. Initially, he asked me to set up the fingerprint but it turns out to be not working. He said he will enter my details manually. Secondly, it is about how to do the handwash. Finally, I entered the main section which is the crew member in the main area. He explained how to make different coffees and I actually started preparing and giving to the customers based on their orders. Everyone was ordering the original blend and it was a little bit easy because I am actually working at the same place. I did several mistakes while making the coffee. I dropped the cream and milk so many times and fucked with the numbers on the machine. After two hours, he gave me 10 minutes break and I ate one doughnut and iced coffee for my breakfast/lunch. I had a really good conversation with everyone at Tim Hortons. One thing I want to make sure of is I am the only guy who is working over there and the remaining people are all Aunties or girls. After my schedule, I came home along with me I bought chicken. Aravind made curry in a hurry because of the time and I ate while watching the TV. I watched the tv until evening and went to bathe afterwards. After the bath, I started reading the book while listening to the music. It felt so good to listen to the music while reading the entertaining/ thriller book. Right now, I am done with reading the book, I have to eat my dinner, brush my teeth, soak the almonds, and think of watching the HTML tutorial before going to sleep.