

I went to college in the morning and attended classes between 8 am and 2 pm. During my second class, my professor gave us chocolates to pick from a box because of the Halloween festival. Once we completed both classes, Madhav and I went to Walmart to buy groceries for him and some body products for me. In the end, I spent 25 dollars on body wash, shampoo, and lip balm. When I came back home, Mahesh's bro was writing his exam, and he gave the screen sharing access but not the control to drag and click. Finally, we asked and got permission, and we both wrote the exam very well. I ate my lunch and spent some time working on the project before I went to Motimahal Restaurant on Gerrards street. Our roommates went there; we ate channa bhature for our dinner. After a while, I came back home, submitted my cover letter, and got 46% similarity. I was scared to the death, wrote the letter again, submitted it, got 0% this time, and emailed my professor that I submitted the wrong resume. Before I went to sleep, I talked with my roomies.
