

I woke up literally at 5:30 am not because I was excited about the journey. It's because of my constipation problem. I did my daily chores and bathed because I needed to visit a few temples. I and my mother went to Sri Rama temple and the gangamma temple in my village. After that, I spent my time packing stuff and watching web series on my amazon prime. In the afternoon, bujjamma came to my house and took a few photos with me. I bathed in the afternoon and got ready and went to a few houses to say goodbyes. Few people came and greeted me with money and showered me, with love, while I was leaving. We reached the airport at 9 pm and I said goodbyes to my parents and went inside for boarding. the luggage was in perfect condition and I paid the extra money for the extra cabin baggage and proceeded to immigration. After so many hurdles and so much waiting in the queue, I completed both an immigration check as well a security check. I saw my gate and I had plenty of time to board the flight. So, as a reason, I went to the lounge accessing with niyo global debit card by paying just 2 rupees. I ate the food, drank coffee, ate fruits, spoke to Krishna for a long time while eating food, and watched cricket. I spent most of my time over there before I boarded my flight to Canada. tomorrow is going to be a long day for me. I am going to witness the longest day of my entire life.
