

It has been the trend for me for the last couple of days to wake up by phone getting a call from someone. Today is another day for this kind of thing. I got a call at noon and it was a security company calling me because of the security guard position I applied for in their company. They didn't do any interviews and straight away offered the security guard position to me. They sent me an email to submit the documents for the role. In that, they asked void cheque, and sin and It wasn't looking good to me at that time. I called them and told them that I am interested in the job but I will come to our office to submit the documents. They accepted and gave me an appointment for tomorrow at 10 am. After the call, I did my bathroom chores and ate my lunch. In the afternoon, I studied the HTML language by watching their videos. In the evening, I went out to buy the groceries with Mahesh at the No Frills store. I came back home and had a bath while listening to the music. After that, I did two things such as read a couple of newspapers and the gone girl book for about 30 to 35 pages. I had my dinner and wrote this diary while watching the TV. After this, I will do my brush, soak the almonds, ready to sleep.