I attended the class and the professor gave the project to everyone to do. The whole class was about the project and it was nothing else apart from that. We got the source code from donia. The only part we have to do is add two or three columns extra. After the class, I ate because the wifi connection guy came and repaired the wifi. After lunch, I spent time on the security license exam and went downtown to do an uber walk. I got only two orders. In the span of two orders, I got 16 dollars tip for one order. there were a lot of guys who are riding bicycles and delivering orders. Most of the orders went to them and I waited for so much time just for orders. In the end, I decided to come back. I came home, ate dinner, spent time on stocks, watched web series, and went to sleep. The most difficult part of the day was waking up.
